From Your Pastor

Years ago, my cousin was getting ready to start first grade. All summer, his parents, my grandmother, and the rest of the family talked with him about this new adventure. He wasn't so sure about this. We tried to build him up and get him excited about going.

"You will have so much fun," we said. "You will make so many friends and you'll learn a lot."

We had a special meal, we talked about how much we all enjoyed school, and his parents took him shopping for school clothes. The first day of first grade finally came. We were all hopeful.

When he got home, he was in a great mood. He made friends, he learned a lot, too. He said that he was glad he went.

There was a slight problem: He thought you only go to school once, and he had already done it. He had accomplished it, and it wasn't that bad.

I was not there when the family broke the news that he would be going back - day after day and for years. Whew.

This reminds me of some good life advice: Bloom where you are planted!

Blessings,
Ande

Thanks to all our volunteers who showed up and served our community last Saturday for Inasmuch Day! Unhoused folks showered and ate, parkgoers were hydrated, foster children supported, folks loved by cleaning their facility, school grounds cleaned, students and faculty prayed for, bells rung, blessing bags and care kits assembled, ramps built, food cooked, collected and sorted, cars checked and repaired, gardens planted and tended, sidewalks pressure washed, bus passes given, clothes laundered, blankets made, wall painted, senior adults sung and visited with, rides given, household and personal hygiene items donated, and many lives touched. And thanks to all those who donated items or money in support of these projects. Let's keep serving together!
