From Your Pastor

This week, I visited one of our church members in the hospital. We had a meaningful conversation during my visit, and he shared that his procedure was successful. He mentioned that he would be going home the next day. His daughter joked, "This is one of the good kinds of hospital visits."

Over the years, I have experienced a wide variety of hospital visits. I recall one Christmas when I visited a friend who had been transferred to three different hospitals during the holiday season. When I walked into his room, he looked haggard and weary from the lengthy ordeal.

He said, "Pastor, I need to tell you something. I am so very tired. I have prayed and prayed and prayed. Last night as I was praying, I felt someone's hand on my shoulder. It felt so real that I thought a nurse had come into the room and touched me." He then paused a good while and said, "Am I crazy?"

As we locked eyes, I could sense his genuine concern. I said, "Joe, you know what I believe that was? That hand you felt was a tangible reminder of God's presence with you, both in that moment and throughout your journey."

He seemed to be relieved.

Psalm 145 promises that "the Lord is near to all who call on him." This is truly good news.

Blessings,
Ande
